Detail

The Master of Laws is a postgraduate degree consisting of 48 units of credit. It is taught in English and normally takes one year of full-time study, or the part-time equivalent. The program structure requires the successful completion of elective courses. Candidates for admission to the program require a Bachelor degree in the relevant discipline, or other approved equivalent academic and professional qualifications. This program provides law graduates with education in specialist areas of the law. Courses studied combine legal content with consideration of relevant interdisciplinary aspects of the subject matter and a focus on policy. Each course contains a significant research component.

Pathway to further study

Graduates have access to a range of Graduate Certificates, Graduate Diplomas and Masters degrees. For further details see the university's program guide at www.handbook.unsw.edu.au.

Awarding Institution

The University of New South Wales is a public university, established in 1949 under legislation passed by the Parliament of New South Wales. It is a member of The Group of Eight (Go8) coalition of Australian universities, intensive in research and comprehensive in general and professional education. For additional information about the University of New South Wales see www.unsw.edu.au.

Description of the Australian Higher Education System

Introduction

The Australian higher education system consists of independent, self-governing public and private universities and higher education institutions that award higher education qualifications. All higher education providers must be listed on the Australian Qualifications Framework Register of Recognised Education Institutions and Authorised Accreditation Authorities in Australia. This register is developed under instructions from Commonwealth, State and Territory Education and Training Ministers (See: <http://www.aqf.edu.au>).

Qualifications

The Australian Qualifications Framework (AQF) is a single national and comprehensive system of qualifications offered by higher education, vocational education and training, and secondary schools. The AQF comprises a set of national qualifications (ie awards), titles and qualification descriptors (See accompanying diagram). The AQF specifies the main criteria for defining qualifications based on the general characteristics of learning outcomes at each qualification level. The main qualifications awarded by the higher education institutions are bachelors, masters and doctoral degrees, and graduate certificates and graduate diplomas. Research higher degrees at masters and doctoral level are normally assessed by external examiners. The higher education qualifications descriptors are periodically reviewed against best national and international practice. Guidelines for each qualification title are published in the Australian Qualifications Framework Implementation Handbook (See: <http://www.aqf.edu.au>).

Admission

Requirements for admission to particular programs are set by individual universities and colleges that generally provide a range of routes for entry and admit those students considered to have potential to successfully complete programs of study. Admission of school leavers to undergraduate programs typically is on the basis of the level of achievement in Year 12 secondary education, although some institutions and programs also use interviews, portfolios or demonstrated interest or aptitude. Most institutions also provide alternative entry provisions via bridging or foundation programs for mature age students or other special provisions. Admission to post-graduate programs is generally based on the level of achievement in previous higher education studies; in most cases, admission to PhD programs is based on high achievement in a research masters degree or in a bachelor degree with first class honours or second class honours division A.

Quality

Australia has an international reputation for high quality education that is built on best practice in accreditation, quality recognition, quality assurance, and student consumer protection. All higher education institutions must be accredited by State and Territory Governments in accordance with strict criteria detailed in the National Protocols for Higher Education Approval Processes. These Protocols are nationally agreed principles that ensure consistent criteria and standards across Australia in such matters as the recognition of new universities, the operation of overseas higher education institutions in Australia, and the accreditation of higher education courses offered by institutions other than universities (See: <http://www.deewr.gov.au>). All institutions receiving Australian Government financial support must meet quality and accountability requirements that are set out in the Higher Education Support Act 2003. The Australian Government also uses a range of tools to measure and monitor the quality of outcomes, while the interests of international students are protected by the Education Service for Overseas Students Act 2000 and its National Code, providing tuition and financial assurance and a consistent approach to institution registration. Australian Universities are autonomous bodies that are responsible for managing quality through internal accreditation processes and commitment to codes of practice. Universities and other higher education providers are required by legislation to have in place appropriate quality assurance processes. These processes are periodically audited by the Australian Universities Quality Agency (AUQA). AUQA is Australia's principal national quality agency for higher education. It is an independent body that undertakes quality audits of higher education institutions and accreditation authorities (See: <http://www.auqa.edu.au>). AUQA publicly reports on performance and outcomes, assists in quality enhancement and advises on quality assurance.

PROSECUTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE
REPUBLIC OF MALDIVES

23rd June 2009

To Whom it May Concern

This is to state that Ms. Aishath Fazna Ahmed, National ID: A-072566, has been an important member of the prosecution team of the Prosecutor General's Office since its inception in September 2008. With the inclusion of her prior service in the Attorney General's Office, Ms. Fazna has an accumulated experience of approximately three years as a prosecutor.

In the period that I have interacted with Ms. Fazna, I have noticed her as a professionally competent person. Her result oriented approach towards work and commitment to efficient undertaking of her job responsibilities is exemplary. In this regard her dedication, hard-work and persistence have enabled her to be a quick learner on the job.

In my own observation, Ms. Fazna is a reliable and hard working employee who puts in a lot of effort in all her work. Thus she is a valued member of the prosecution team, who can be relied on, regardless of the difficulty and complexity of the case or the novelty of the challenge.

Ms. Aishath Fazna Ahmed has the capacity and determination to achieve results in challenging situations and I wish her success in her endeavors.

To whom it may concern

Dear Sir/Madam,

Visit to Allen & Gledhill LLP, Singapore

1. This is to confirm that Aishath Fazna Ahmed had visited from 15 October to 19 October 2007 the Litigation Department, and from 29 October to 2 November 2007 the Corporate Department, of our offices as part of a group of eight visiting counsel from the Attorney-General's Chambers of Maldives.
2. As part of the visit to the Litigation Department, Aishath was brought to the High Court of Singapore, Attorney-General's Chambers of Singapore, Singapore International Arbitration Centre, Singapore Mediation Centre, and Syariah Court of Singapore. Aishath was accordingly introduced to the way each of these various institutions functioned, as well as gained a broad understanding of these litigation and ADR processes.
3. Talks on Litigation, Arbitration, IPOs, Insolvency and the Criminal Law Practice in Singapore were also organized for the visiting counsel. In addition, Aishath and the other visiting counsel were familiarized with the firm's daily processes, including the use of conflict and anti-money laundering check systems, various legal research tools, and the use of electronic filing and video conferencing systems.
4. Throughout Aishath's visit, lunches and teas were also arranged with various partners and associates across various practice groups so as to facilitate interaction and the exchange of information of the legal work done by both sides.
5. During Aishath's visit to the Corporate Department, Aishath was also seated with Corporate lawyers so as to allow Aishath to watch first-hand the typical work day of a corporate lawyer.
